

According to science, who is the most handsome man in the world?

By Aurora Ferrer 08/06/2019

It has always been said that beauty is subjective and that it depends on the eye of the one who looks. But science has a formula to solve this complex issue and provide an objective opinion about the beauty of a face based on the golden ratio.

But is there anyone as perfect as Leonardo Da Vinci's Vitruvian Man on the planet? According to cosmetic surgeon Julian de Silva, yes. And that man, as you'll be imagining, is George Clooney. After analyzing his face with a computer mapping technique, it turns out that the jaw, chin, face, eyebrows and nose of the American actor coincides 91.86% with the golden ratio.

And he is not the only one who has been mapped by Silva. In this photo gallery you can discover the ten most handsome men in the world:

