

To determine which lady was the fairest of them all, Harley Street's Dr. Julian De Silva, combined his tech with the ancient Greek Golden Ratio of Beauty Phi, which was used by Renaissance artists like Michelangelo and Leonardo Da Vinci to create mathematically perfect (which is to say, symmetrical) subjects.

Dr. De Silva told the Daily Mail that, Hadid "was the clear winner when all elements of the face were measured for physical perfection." Scoring a whopping 94.35 percent on a scale that should be taken with 94.35 million grains of salt, "she had the highest overall reading for her chin."

Our Queen Beyoncé was a close runner-up, walking away from the random test with 92.44 percent perfection. And yet, despite how arbitrary these "scientific" findings are, this flagrant affront has stoked the ire of the interwebs, with many crying foul.

Runner-up was Amber Heard, 33, with a 91.85 percent pretty score with Ariana Grande pulling up in fake fourth place and Taylor Swift in fifth.
