Bella Hadid is voted the most beautiful woman in the world - but this causes criticism

Bella Hadid was named the most beautiful woman in the world after calculating a new computer technology, with Beyoncé finishing in second place. But this list and the definition of beauty are heavily criticized in the net

In recent years, Bella Hadid has worked all the way up to Model Olympus. But now she not only has the title of a top model, she should also be the most beautiful woman in the world. In any case, this title was given to her thanks to a new computer program. However, according to the critics, the ranking of women lags behind the zeitgeist - and Twitter reacts.

Bella Hadid is said to be the most beautiful woman in the world

Cosmetic surgeon Julian De Silva "calculated" Bella Hadid's beauty - and that of other stars. How to imagine that? According to the Daily Mail, he introduced a new computer technology that measures the face shape, eyes, eyebrows, nose, lips, and chin for symmetry. The software should help solve "mysteries about what makes someone physically beautiful," said the expert.

According to the analysis, the face of Bella Hadid comes with 94.35 percent of the so-called golden ratio - a well-known principle of aesthetic proportions dating back to antiquity - particularly close. Music icon Beyoncé finished second with 92.44 percent, while Amber Heard, Ariana Grande, Kate Moss and Cara Delevingne were among the most beautiful women in the world.

Of course, this news struck their medial waves. While fans of Beyoncé and Bella Hadid discussed online who really is "the most beautiful woman", the ranking of women caused displeasure among many other users, especially users. In recent years, the fight against prevailing ideals of beauty has become an important social agenda. The desire for authenticity increases, while outdated beauty standards and, above all, alleged perfection are called into question.

This is also noticeable in the discussion about the list of Julian De Silva. "For once, I do not agree with science that we should not tell young girls, 'You should look that way, to be beautiful.' Each person is unique, you are all beautiful in your own way," wrote a Twitter user, for example. Another user wondered, "Really, what are these articles published for, so that girls feel uncomfortable with themselves in this modern world?" This is one thing science should stay out of, because there are more important things to look out for to be able to focus. "
