

Robert Pattinson is the most handsome man in the world, according to science

Robert Pattinson, a famous British actor born in '86, according to some would be the most beautiful man in the world. A risky statement, if we take into account that men in the world only almost 4 billion, and to observe them all and evaluate them it would take a whole life, and perhaps not even enough. But, let's say, Pattinson would be the most beautiful of all those famous, in sight, among the VIPs and those who are lucky enough to live careers like his, where he is constantly exposed to the public, to the paparazzi and to the attention of media, where you are made up and dressed as experts and exposed to many attentions.

The curiosity, however, lies in the motivation that supports the idea that Pattinson is the most beautiful in the world: aesthetics and the Renaissance canon. That's right, according to the idea (at least bizarre, it must be said) of the cosmetic surgeon Dr. Julian De Silva, Pattinson turns out to be the man with the features that most reflect the so-called "golden canon".

